The US Neurology Devices Market to Present Opportunities for Growth----Aarkstore Enterprise Market Research Aggregation

Aarkstore announce a new report "The US Neurology Devices Market to Present Opportunities for Growth" through its vast collection of market research report.

Summary

Some of the major markets like cardiovascular and orthopedic devices have witnessed immense innovation over the last decade in terms of procedural ease of use and catering to previously unmet needs. The advancement in interventional cardiology technology and grafting procedures for orthopedic applications has already achieved peaks. Both these markets are now saturated in terms of innovation and will be deemed as mature markets in the next five years. Many of the cardiovascular and orthopedic firms are now looking towards new areas in order to sustain or bolster growth. One such industry where GlobalData expects huge growth and investment opportunities in the future is neurology devices.

Major cardiovascular technologies such as cardiac rhythm management and stents are now being explored for use in conditions of the nervous system in an effort to create new growth opportunities. Recent market events show that competition within the neurovascular and neurostimulation device markets is on the rise. The market is currently dominated by traditionally cardiovascular device centric companies like Medtronic, Boston Scientific and St. Jude Medical. A look at the clinical trial scenario for neurostimulation devices and neurovascular stents reiterates this fact. The aforesaid companies together have over fifteen major clinical trials underway, investigating neurology devices for various indications.

Scope

- The study discusses the neurology devices market, presenting the factors that could have a positive impact on the market.
- It provides information on the three key markets – Neurostimulation Devices, Embolic Systems and Neurovascular Stents.
