

Published based on How Do I Put Music On My Website: Overview

How Do I Put Music On My Website: Overview

Sometimes people forget that not all computers are made equal. Many people have to wait several seconds or minutes for a flash banner to load. But, how do I put music on my website? is a question that is asked by a lot of website entrepreneurs. The short answer is that putting music on a website is very easy. It's just a matter of embedding a music file on a website using html code that is free and available on the internet. If a person wants, they can also add other bells and whistles with the code.

There are also internet businesses that, for a fee, will provide a person with the html code to copy and paste onto their website if they don't want to do it themselves. Some of these businesses will send updates of code to change music on a regular basis. Which can also be done for free by typing in the correct html code.

But, there are a few things that need to be thought through before one decides to put music on their website that can impact how well a business does. First, copyright laws apply to everyone. A person needs to check and make sure that the music they play on their website is not breaking any copyright regulations when it is played. Most music is copyrighted and a person is not allowed to play it on their website without purchasing a license.

Another consideration is that if the music file is over 45KB most people will not wait for the music to load. Not everyone has a fast system, these people are also customers. They will exit the website before the music has finished downloading and a potential customer is lost.

Music is a very personal and subjective thing. Unless the website is exclusive to a target audience that likes the same group or song, there will be people who will exit because they hate the music. These are customers who will not browse the site and will not make a purchase. They hate the music, they are gone.

Another consideration has to do with driving traffic. If you have an interesting website that people want to visit, some people are going to pop into your website during their break or lunch at work. These people may like your website, but not enough to lose their jobs because your music has just alerted management that they are surfing the web. This is called aversion therapy. It is human nature that when a person has a bad or embarrassing experience doing something they will not do it again. If the website created the bad experience they will not visit it again.

Find out how to put royalty free music on your website and check out these royalty free music sources.

You can also find this article published on How Do I Put Music On My Website: Overview, and on the tag pages internet, Web Design, web site design.