Wordpress 101 - What Is Wordpress And How Does It Work?

You should really consider using Wordpress if you are set to start your website but still wondering which format would be the best for you. It is highly likely that you have heard it being used by many as a blogging platform but there are plenty of things which you can do with it, rather than just blogging. A website or CMS (Content Management System) can be made using Wordpress and there are several advantages to it:

Installing Wordpress becomes simple when you have fantastico in the domain control panel after which it takes a few navigational steps and you can have your website ready in minutes. In case fantastico is not available you have to do this manually. It is completely uncomplicated if you follow the recommended directions. In case you feel awkward with both these options, get someone to do it for you. This job does not cost much and does not require great amount of time especially for someone who has the right experience.

Updating a traditional website that was built by someone else can be costly to the site owner because you have to not only pay a designer but you also have to wait while they get back to you and actually get it done. Using a system like Wordpress makes sense since it is very convenient to use and simple to learn. You could update your own site yourself and you do not have to waste time waiting for the designer to show up.

Another plus point about using Wordpress is that you can without any hassle outsource all website upgrades and changes. Simply set up a virtual assistant with a unique set of username and password and she logs in to work on your site. No more of the constant checking whether you have put up the latest version of the site or whether you have mistakenly overwritten someone else's text.

The Wordpress program includes Categories and Archives which are intrinsic to the system and add to convenience of use.

Search engines find sites which are regularly updated very convenient. Because of the type of the site and Wordpress, chances are that you would be renewing your site frequently and this is going to do wonders to your search engine rankings. Your site picks up as soon as the blog search engines start to hook you.

When you create a website using Wordpress you also get a RSS feed as part of the service. Your customers and other visitors can easily subscribe to your RSS feed and be aware of any new additions to your website.

This is a very successful way to make your site popular with increasing the number of people coming back for more knowledge and solutions. What should give you just a few ideas on how you can start using Wordpress to create a website that draws in more traffic and makes your life easier.
