

Published based on Grants For Single Mothers"

Grants For Single Mothers"

You see the ads whenever you go on the net. They claim that President Obama himself wants single mothers to go back to school. Thing is, when you peel through the layers of hype, the core of the message is true. The country's chief executive has set up a program that actually helps single parents (not just mothers but dads, too) obtain college grants.

Single parents should apply for what's being called Obama's 'Moms Return to School' Government Grant Scholarship program. Online study is preferred path with this program as it allows for single parents to be at home with their children while studying.

This "education stimulus grant," is part of the Pell Grant program. It can garner around $5,000 annual tuition, with the final amount based on previous education, the curriculum desired as well as financial need. Another program, the American Opportunity Tax Credit program, can set it up so the first $4,000 of higher education is free. For more information on online college, check the web.

Like all federal education grants, one must fill out a FASFA form to find out what they can get. If done correctly, they can even cover non-educational matters such as daycare, housing and other basic needs.

A good way to start sourcing out these grants is to first decide what area you want to get an advance education in. Then target the online schools that offer the right curriculum. Apply to those schools, and immediately introduce yourself to the institution's financial officers. It's this personnel's job to help you obtain the single parent, and any other, grants they can get their hands on.

It is truly critical to realize that the federal government isn't the only source for this kind of money. Your state and local governments have many programs, such as your local Lotto, raising funds for furthering education. The best way to find these grants is by visiting the counties family service or economic office. The unemployment office may also have state funded grants available to help single parents find a better paying job.

Another place to find out more about this is the website Grants.gov, which finds specific grants for many categories. Use "search grant opportunities" tool at the top of the page to see what grants are available. On the other hand, be very, very careful about those sites using the president's name. What many will try to do is steer a needy student into spurious loans or similar situations. If you are looking for more information on online college, you can research the internet.

No matter what, even in these tough economic times, there are now ways for single parents to pick them up by their bootstraps and put themselves in a better situation with an online degree. Done correctly, one can have the majority of one's bills paid for by a number of college grants and scholarships.

You can also find this article published on Grants For Single Mothers", and on the tag pages college courses online, college grants, colleges online, E-Learning, grants for college, online college, online education, online programs, online school, online schools, online universities, scholarships and grants, schools online.