Not at all. There are plenty of authentic and reliable ways to make money by working from home. The secret is knowing how to separate the scams from the real jobs.

Here's a hint: Legitimate jobs will typically never require you to pay a fee to obtain considerably more details, and so they don't come in unrequested rubbish e-mail messages.

Still, there's an abundance of earning prospective in working from home. "Corporations are learning they can save a handsome profit by hiring home-based working fathers to do projects along the lines of word processing, writing, computer programming, even tutoring," says Lesley Spencer Pyle, founder of Home-Based Working Fathers.

The vast majority of work opportunities detailed beneath demand some sort of up-to-date computer, a high-speed Internet connection, a phone using a dedicated land based and a peaceful home to work. Envision reporting to work in your pj's!

Customer support rep Many organizations, for example J. Crew, Express Jet, 1-800-flowers, and actually the Internal revenue service, outsource customer support operations to third-party organizations who then hire home-based employees or perhaps "brokers" to take enquiries and orders. Whenever you call 1-800-flowers, you may be talking to Rebecca Dooley, a retired police and employees of Alpine Access, a major call center service. When you dialed the number, your phone had been automatically routed to Rebecca's spare living space within Colorado.

Alpine Access currently employs more than 7,500 work-at-home customer service agents who take in-bound calls (there's no outbound or cold calling) for dozens of companies. "This works perfectly for me because I can set up my hours around my family's busy lifestyle," says Rebecca, who usually works 20 to 32 hours a week, depending on her schedule.

While the typical hourly rate is about $9, Alpine Access agents can earn up to $20 an hour with incentives and bonuses. Rebecca also receives benefits and a matching 401(k) plan. (Some companies consider their staff independent contractors, so they don't provide benefits.)
