Guide To Compare And Chose The Best Ereader.

[!:<http://www.webmarksolutions.com/wp-content/uploads/2010/04/AndreyKipor0.jpg>]All e-book readers have different features. Some of them as Onyx Boox 60, Hanvon N518 and Hanvon N526 support hand writing, annotating and other text marking possibilities. Some functions ( besides Hanvon only hand writing text recognition ) are available at the most expensive Sony models. Such e-readers with touch screens are divided into two groups by construction. First is represented by Sony PRS-600 operated by finger touch. Such readers have the second touch screen layer ABOVE the electronic paper display. It is more comfortable but you have to pay by worse reading experience as such displays are greyish and less contrast then common readers. Onyx Boox 60 and both Hanvon sensor screen models N518 and N526 have the Wacom touch screen installed BELOW the main e-paper display so the reading quality is the same as using ereaders without touch screen. Their displays are really white and high contrast but all writing and annotating can be done only by stylus.

Other difference is the way to load e-books. Some e-book readers as Kindle, Nook and Sony are wireless but can connect only to certain sites mainly providing with proprietary formats paid ebooks. Other ereaders do not have wireless connection. Hanvon, Hanlin, Sony PRS-300, Pocketbook and many others must be connected by USB to your PC to load ebooks from computer. Or you can download ebooks to SD card and insert it into the ebook reader. Onyx Boox 60 is the only wireless ebook reading device with built-in web browser able to enter any sites and download ebooks from any book stores or libraries.

Usually e-readers have only English user's interface. They may show poor support for other languages ebooks and texts encoding. The most universal e-readers with the real multi-language support are Onyx Boox and Hanvon e-book readers which have a good choice of languages reinstalled including all European, Chinese, Korean and even Japanese.

The main sizes of the eBook reader displays are 5-inch, 6-inch, 7 and more inches. Larger - more expensive. 5-inch eBook readers presented by Hanvon N516, N518 and N526, Sony PRS-300, Pocketbook 360 are the good choice for pocket carrying when the portability is important. Large size ebook readers like Kindle DX, Irex, coming Que or Sony PRS-900 are preferable for full size PDF docs. 6-inch models ( our best choice are Kindle 2 by price, and Onyx Boox by functions ) combine to certain limits both possibilities.

The price range for e-Book reading devices with e-paper displays starts now at 170-190$ Sony PRS-300 and Hanvon N516 and go up to thousand bucks per Irex Ilad. The prices depend on the screen size and features availability - WiFi, Touch Screen, Built-in-memory size, number of eBook formats supported by the device, scripts and languages supported, number of grey levels of the e-ink screens. When you check specifications to make your choice, do not forget to ask supplier what is included into the set. The same e-reader maybe sold with wall charger, USB cord and leather case as Onyx Boox 60 and as a bare device without any accessories ( BeBook Neo ). Hanvon N516 ( Azbooka N516 ), N518 and N526 prices include leather case, 2GB-4GB SD cards and USB cord. Sony ereaders are usually sold without accessories. Only large size SONY daily edition is sold with accessories. The set must include protective case, charger, USB cord and sometimes SD card. The total price of accessories set is about $50 so remember to check what is included into ebook reader box. Studying ereader prices - be sure to compare apples to apples and oranges to oranges.

Is it possible to buy cheap ebook reader with reliable quality? What is the best ereader price now? At present the best cheap ereader device is sold at $189. It is the price for Hanvon N516 with full set of accessories. The prices have been reduced lately as Ebook readers production cost went down. But the prices may be raised 20-30% if US dollar weakens against Chinese yuan. Maybe it is the best time to buy e-reader now.
