If your goal is to create a successful viral marketing campaign that will lift your Free Online Dating Tips business to a higher level, it's up to you to put in the time and effort into pulling it all together and building a solid plan to get the results you want. It's extremely important to have a viral marketing plan in place if you want to start off and end with a bang. Viral marketing is not your run of the mill advertising campaign. With viral marketing, a lot of your advertising comes from the hearsay of others, who tell the people around them about this great new product or service they've found. It's a truly honest form of advertising, due to the fact it not only requires focus, but it needs a right action done at just the right time for it to work.

This article contains some great information and instructions on how viral marketing can work for you:

The initial thing to remember before you conjure up a viral advertising scheme is that secrecy about your product is the key. Keeping things quiet is of the utmost importance here. Yes, that's right. It might sound a bit confusing at first but that's how it's done to get the best results. Don't expose your online business's name until you have reached the end of your campaign. The enigma that surrounds viral advertising is the major force behind its success as a marketing strategy. Keep the campaign going, and make sure that you use the excitement and momentum from your campaign to carry you through to the end. You will have to be extremely creative and captivating so that people don't lose interest during your campaign. Capture your audience by presenting engaging and entertaining ideas. Your advertising will yield impressive results if you do, and will certainly disappoint if you don't.

Use this knowledge to position your product. Promote your product or services with a message that's unique and interesting. If it doesn't have one you can make one up, but make sure it has some appealing or exciting event that will interest people in your viral campaign. All you have to do is add a little mystery to bring them in. While your story needs to have the characteristics of something both intriguing and exciting, it also has to remain a story with viral potential. To achieve this, you have to keep your product/service a secret and let people get involved. Remember, you are not creating an ad. You are orchestrating an entire campaign that people in your target market will spread on their own. As a result, exercise caution when performing your campaign; avoid the hard sell, as that will turn people off.

One of the most popular ways to go viral with your marketing is to use videos. I'm sure you have had someone send you a video that they found on the internet - that could be your clip if you're willing to put the time into making an effective video. If someone finds a use for it, it's not hard to see why they would share it with their friends. Contained in the video should be an easy option allowing viewers to forward the link to your video to their friends and contacts; to pass along the information and enjoyment of the video to others. If you want a million views on your video, you'd do well to upload it to Youtube or another video sharing sites, from which you can gain a massive audience. It's possible for people to link to your video or embed it so it shows up on their own vlog. You'll want to make sure that you include the URL for your website with the video, but avoid anything that looks like a blatant advertisement.
