It's weird to say but Brian Johnson makes more money than most doctors out there by just creating small websites and putting them on the internet. It usually takes Brian about a half hour to put each site up and then he moves onto other sites.

The only time he worries about the sites is when he sees them climbing the ranks of Google. That's when he begins making money. There's nothing cooler than getting paid big checks for websites that he barely remembers putting together. The best part of all of this is once the website launches, everything else runs on completely autopilot for doing just a half hour of work.

Brian isn't some big pimping guy with cool cars and huge mansions. Brian is from Minnesota and claims that people look at you funny when you do stuff like that.

Brian Johnson is blowing the lid off of the best kept secrets in online marketing.
