Just about everyone's heard the hype for SEOLinkVine, created by Brad Callen. Brad is Mark Callen's brother. You know Mark Callen because he created the popular systems MyArticleNetwork and Article Marketing Automation. Brad's SEOLinkVine is along the same lines as Mark's programs. By now you've probably read reviews by Beta testers that are singing the praises of this new product and all it can do to help you build your business. We've seen the same reviews and pages you have, so we thought we'd take a closer look at what Brad is offering.

Our first impression was that it's just like all the rest of the article submitter apps out there. As per usual, you'll write your content, post or article, then hand it over the Brad's program... then it will submit it (hopefully) to thousands of eager web properties. The biggest difference, however, is that SEOLinkVine does not submit your work to the same old directories and depositories.

The thing that impressed us most was not the syndication program or the built in spinner. The statistics program really did it. Often times with software like SEOLinkVine you write, submit, and then hope everything finds its intended destination. There's no way of verifying if everything worked the way it's suppose to unless you do a bunch of manual checks. But SEOLinkVine comes with monitoring capabilities coded into it. You can see exactly how each of your articles is performing and how many of the SEOLinkVine sites are linking back to you-as those links go live. There aren't very many programs that provide this kind of monitoring service, as far as we know. And this is a huge timesaver.

For the most part, the actions of article submission software can feel a little bit shady. Sometimes it feels awkward to submit to sites that have a long queue of articles waiting to be spun and usually not very well. Great care went into choosing good, and white hat, content sites for SEOLinkVine's network, and only white hat methods are employed in the spinning process. Everything is completely legitimate and 'on the table' with this software. That leaves you with being able to enjoy your time-savings so you can do other things.

In our opinions, the content editor is tops and truly well-done. For content sites or blogs, you can change your article text font, or add bolding, or italics. These particular features are not always found on similar programs. From what we can tell, SEOLinkVine allows you to retain some of your individual personality as you write your articles. That's a nice added bonus that you might not find elsewhere. SEOLinkVine, like any other kind of program, will not do 100% of the work on your behalf. It eases the overall process, though. Of course, your success still completely depends on you and no one else. That's one great aspect of this software, it is meant to help, not replace.
