Take a moment and think of those people who attract you. This is not attraction in a physical or sexual sense, but attraction in a leadership way. Those people who stay physically in shape, who are confident in appearance and demeanor, and who care about others, demonstrate leadership qualities that attract others.

If order for you to demonstrate leadership qualities that will attract people into your business, you need to dress well and get into shape physically. You do not have to train to run in a marathon contest but you need to drop the excessive pounds and you need to work out on a regular basis.

Are you less than confident in public? If so, you can take steps so that you will appear more sure about yourself.

Understand that we all suffer from the same or similar fear in our day to day encounters. But are you confident enough to start speaking to the person next to you in public? If not, here is a secret, the man or woman next to you, is not confident enough to start speaking with you. If you start talking first, you will demonstrate more confidence than him or her.

All you have to do is make small conversation with someone, anyone, once a day for the next month. After one month, your confidence level will be higher than it has ever been before.

Do you car about others or do you simply care about yourself? If you want people to join your business opportunity, you need to demonstrate a real interest in others. When you ask about people's week, do you listen for an answer or do you start thinking about something else as soon as you are done with your question. Try this this month. Ask at least one person each day about their week. Listen to the answer, and then comment on their answer.

Many would increase their numbers of recruits if they focused on improving their leadership skills. Become the person you would want to join with in business and you will be a success in the MLM business.
