Google Cash Detective Isn't A Scam

I thought it was a scam when I first saw it. God knows, there are enough scams out there promising to make you money on Google. Some just take your money and run and others try to get you to fork over even more money for "advanced" programs. If you complain that the program doesn't work, they tell you it's your own fault. I had just about given up the idea of opening a business online.

So when I stumbled across Google Cash Detective, I figured it was just another scam. Pay $9.99 for a program that never arrives and when you try for a refund, the company has disappeared. I looked the site over anyway, and there were two things I noticed. The first one was the cost of only one dollar, and the second was that nothing was being shipped to me, I could view the videos online as soon as I paid.

Well, a buck is less than the cost of a cheap cup of coffee, so I figured what the heck. I could probably get a laugh watching the rehashed "new" ideas for generating phenomenal income on Google. The new magic formula for getting rich.

Sorry, Google Cash Detective, I was wrong. The truth is the videos were informative and did actually offer new and practical ideas that I could use. I didn't need to invest more time or money than I had and I could start right away without even setting up a website.

This isn't some magic act where "poof" you're suddenly rolling in money. You have to take the time to study and implement the ideas for your own business. My first day I made less than ten dollars, but it might have been a million as thrilled as I was to make anything. Hey, got my dollar back. It will take a little longer to recoup the money I spent on those other programs.

I haven't been doing this even a month yet, but every day I make a little more. It's not enough to retire on, but I have high hopes that the day is not as far off as I thought it would be. I'm still studying and adding new ideas from the program to increase my web traffic. It's getting better and better.

All you have to do is watch the videos. No waiting for packages to be delivered, no complicated software that you don't know how to run. The videos cover a lot of territory including how to use keywords and how to choose a keyword to get the attention of search engines, how to link to an affiliate without even having a website, and how to choose products that will actually sell.

This is worth a buck just for the ideas. Even if affiliate marketing isn't your thing, a lot of the information can be applied to any online business. Google Cash Detective isn't a scam, it's really a gem.
