The use of network marketing tools has become necessary to fully grow and automate a work at home business. There are tons of self-proclaimed gurus out there that claim their particular tools is essential and can't be done without. It has become increasingly difficult to figure out, especially for the new business owner which ones work now in the 21st century.

When think of this topic, if they are somewhat familiar with the industry, they think of things like sizzle cards, flyers, memory joggers of lists of 100, now why were those popular in the past? Honestly because it was just do stupid simple to hand them out and tell your new distributor to get to work. All they had to do was just to hit the street and start passing out all of this information.

However, what works right now in this industry? This is the central question, particularly in today's market place.

Things have changed dramatically in the last couple years and pestering the neighbor or hosting home parties wont' cut it in the long run, instead, think about having your own website, with the preference being on creating your own personal blog. The given company replicated website just doesn't work for you since, most of them do an extremely poor job at actually marketing the benefits of any kind of particular product. Even worse is the fact that the vast majority of them never allow you to follow up with someone who might have visited your site, even with email.

When you are the owner of your very own blog, you are the forever owner of an extremely powerful network marketing tool, one that can pull in customers and leads from all across the internet. This would make you stand out from among your competitors and from others in your own company as well. The whole idea here is to be online and get yourself in front of where your best prospects are, period.

Next, another can't miss tool is something known as an email auto-responder. What is an auto-responder? The best way to think of it is like a modern day rolodex. In order to really leverage the reach that the internet provides you collect a list of names, email addresses, and possibly phone numbers for all the people you come in contact with. This allows you to follow-up with each and every one of them automatically or send an important announcement to thousands of people by simply sending out one email message. This is why having your own website is so crucial today.

Since relationships are the basis of any kind of MLM business, this tool allows you to do so to thousands at a time. Literally at the push of a button we can go out and send value giving emails to people. So important to follow-up with your prospects in order to really gain their trust and build relationships with those people.
