Dating Affiliate Program

If you are looking at earning commissions by being an affiliate, then you might consider the option of joining up with a dating affiliate program. Dating sites have become very popular these days, and as such there is great potential to get making plenty of money by acting as an affiliate for one. As such, here are some tips that will help you get going.

Try finding a free dating affiliate program. This shouldn't be a problem, as the majority of these programs will be free to start up with. Some sites, however, will charge a fee, while others will require some type of approval process before you join (see more on this seduction book or check this list of best seduction books).

It's also advisable to choose a program that has lifetime commissions. If you choose a site that only offers you a one-off payment, then you will be leaving behind a lot of potential money. It is advisable to try to look for a site that will give you 25% commission for the initial purchase, and then 10% to 15% for any referrals made.

It's also advisable to check through any sites that you will be currently registered with to be able to find referrals. Many people will be disillusioned with the results actually getting from particular sites and will therefore be looking to take their custom elsewhere. As such, if you target these people you can refer them on.

Additionally it is smart to go onto forums where you will be able to add links to the dating sites that you are affiliated with. You can work people looking for dating sites and also those looking for affiliate programs to make money.

Visiting blogs is also another method of finding new people to refer onto your dating sites. If you build conversations and relationships with people through blogs then it is possible to refer them on to your affiliated dating websites.
