[!:<http://www.webmarksolutions.com/wp-content/uploads/2010/12/SteveRush12.jpg>]The skills needed to design and drive traffic to a website may be different from traditional concepts in marketing and advertising. The cost to view ratio is different and the ability to custom market to people shopping for services is a radical new approach to client procurement. For these reasons, it may be difficult to use these new web based tools in house, and for maximum benefit, without consultation from experts. The developers at Dual Media are expert not just in website presentation, but in website utility as well.

Dual Media guides their clients through these new steps and finds the level of marketing with which the client is comfortable. Fresh and exciting design options are often available first from Dual Media. Their staff are up to date on the latest tools in website design and intuitive information organization that gets readers straight to the relevant content. Working with sophisticated search engine optimization is part of the process. Well designed menus also assist in site navigation.

It is not uncommon for the website of a company to be the first thing a customer sees. First impressions matter in business. Making a strong positive impact on the customer can engage them enough to encourage the next step, making direct contact with the business of the client.
