

Published based on Which Should You Select - Free Vs Paid Web Hosting

Which Should You Select - Free Vs Paid Web Hosting

There are many reasons as to why you could be interested in utilizing free hosting instead of buying paid hosting. We are not going to go into that, as that should be a decision you the shopper should decide. Nevertheless, this article we intend to talk about some important factors when selecting either a free hosting provider or a paid shared hosting service provider.

Let us talk a little with regards to free hosting - There are a couple of types of this sort of shared hosting. One would be that the user will not be authorized to use a top level domain but a subdomain - i.e. yourname.freehostname.com. This is not an awful thing; however, a top level is indeed better- i.e. yourdomain.com. Quite a few free hosts may also use something called forced ads on your internet site. In most instances these are not cumbersome; they normally will appear in the footer on the pages. As a rule, free hosting that utilizes forced ads will give more disk space and bandwidth.

Onto paid hosting; with this selection, you are able to select the options on what you want for your shared hosting plan. You decide on disk space, bandwidth and platform. You are in control generally of what you get. You will not be required to show forced ads. Support is almost always more responsive and prepared to help than a free hosting provider.

With both free and paid shared hosting, you do not actually know who you are sharing you space with. The main difference between the two is that many bad neighborhood websites utilize free hosting. Not all internet sites hosted on free hosting will be bad neighborhood, or employed for spamming, nevertheless, there will be quite a few since they are free, many of these users use the mindset that when their hosting is banned, they can move onto the next free hosting provider.

Another thing to think about between free and paid shared hosting is that if you are operating a business, it could seem less reputable if someone sees a 'free hosting by' at the footer, or simply sees a sub-domain. I know personally; I would be skeptical to purchase something from a site if I knew or suspected it was using free hosting. If a business can not afford paid hosting, would I want to buy from them?

Other companies do offer free hosting with out any form of forced ads; however one may have to complete surveys or actually post on a forum to achieve credits. An additional issue with free hosting, it may have hundreds upon hundreds of other websites on it. It could easily slow down your internet site, and or make it not reachable.

In our opinion, if you are looking for shared hosting and have a few dollars to spend per month, you really should use a reputable paid hosting provider. Why take the chance of having a blocked IP, slow webpage or other issues that can go along with free hosting.

If you are searching for free hosting, you should take the time to fully review the fine print. Sometimes one might rather select a quality and inexpensive paid shared hosting provider.

You can also find this article published on Which Should You Select - Free Vs Paid Web Hosting, and on the tag pages free hosting, free vs paid hosting, hosting, Hosts, shared hosting, web hosting reviews.