Planning For Success

Planning for success is some of the best planning that you can do! Have you hear that if you fail to plan then you plan to fail? It's true, right? If you look at some of the practices of successful entrepreneurs you will find that the majority of them have a plan.

Why will my business succeed? (Give a very clear description.) At what point in my sales will I break even? At what point in my sales will I actually be able to take a paycheck? How will I get customers? (And more importantly) How will I keep customers? How much money do I need to get started? How much money do I need to keep going? What types of people do I want working for me? Where will I find these people? What will I pay them?

Why will my business be successful? If you can create a clear and concise description of WHY you will be successful you will have to think about when your company will break even and when it will be profitable. You will have to consider how you will get customers and if you will hire salespeople. What will you pay them and what will their responsibilities be? When will you be able to get paid and how much?

Are you one of the millions and millions of people who want to start a small business? Maybe you are already running your own small business. No matter what rung you currently stand on, on your ladder of success, owning and running your own small business can be a wonderful and lucrative experience! It can also be a horribly stressful and money draining experience too.

You can be in the process of planning your future company or planning on how to make your current company better. It makes no difference. You will have success because you are taking to the time to create a plan of success. Plan for success, plan for mistakes and plan for more success. Try and anticipate roadblocks that may arise and how you will handle them.

Why not start now? You are the only one that can plan your success. Give it some real thought. Give it some real effort. You will get what you put into it. Don't fail to plan. Simply plan to SUCCEED.
