The Yowza Keewadin Treadmill Gets High Marks For A Folding Machine

The Yowza Keewadin treadmill is folding one and one that is getting high marks from many. It is a good option for the serious home runner that does not have space to leave a machine up all the time. It features sturdy construction as well as some elements that make it easier on your body.

One feature that allows this treadmill to be used hard on a consistent basis is the commercial quality motor. As for protecting your body, there is a patented Swing Arm shock absorption technology which can absorb up to 63% more than your typical treadmill. There are many who say they do not get the aches and pains on this machine that they typically do from running.

The attractive console is easy to use as well. You can control a number of features with just one touch. 15 pre-set program keys are included for programs targeting losing weight, fitness, speed, heart rate and more. It can also hold up to 9 different user profiles so that basic information will not need to be entered constantly.

Other included features are an iPod dock with speakers and cup holders. It not only has a Polar Heart Rate Receiver, you also get a Polar chest belt too. Another appreciated feature is the machine's quiet running.

Although the treadmill is of high quality, you will be pleased to know that it also includes a top quality warranty. The warranty covers frame, motor, electronics, parts and in-home labor. There is also a sixty-day money back guarantee.

The Yowza Keewadin treadmill is not an inexpensive folding machine. This is good, because cheap treadmills do not stand up to being used seriously. Bear in mind that the weight of it is about 300 pounds so you might want to pay the extra fee to have it brought inside.
