Just like with a brick and mortar business, you can sell services or products online. Cyberspace is filled with billions of potential customers that need whatever it is you plan to sell. While it takes patience, making money online is easy, and virtually anyone can earn a decent income from the comfort of their own home.

1. Become a blogger. It's free to set up your own blog. There are countless free blogging websites out there. And many of them allow you to place pay-per-click advertising banners in the margins of your blog's webpages. Whenever someone clicks on these advertisement banners, you earn money. All you have to do is publish content to these blogs as often as you can.

2. Freelance Writing: Websites can't survive without a regular stream of fresh content, and that means a wealth of opportunities for freelance writers. Since every small business owner who has a website needs content, your options are endless. If you market yourself right, you'll never be out of work again.

3. Sell Used Merchandise: Did you know that many of the popular online classified websites have sections that list things people give away for free? Well a good way to get started selling products online is to pick those products up and start reselling them. Before you know it, you'll have a business that's generating a 100% profit.

4. Product Reviewer: Product reviewers make money in two different ways. Some people write reviews for websites that are specifically dedicated to reviewing products. The website pays them a flat fee for each review written. Other people review products on their own personal blog. Regardless of how you write the review, the plus side to this job is that most of the time you get paid, and get to keep the product you're reviewing.
