Pay As You Go Iphone Gives Better Options

Pay as you go iphones give you the consumer far more freedom with just the same benefits as a contract iphone.

When you decide you want an iphone, you should consider the pay as you go option. Ok so you have to buy the iphone outright which is quite expensive, but when you consider the freedom and advantages over a contract iphone its well worth thinking about.

First things first if you decide to go with pay as you go, you are not forced in to any long period large fee contract term. If you sat down and thought hard about the cost that you would spend on a 24 month contract it would be much better to be on a pay as you go package.

Secondly by choosing pay as you go you get the freedom to pick from any of the networks available. So lets say you are with Orange network and you find that most of your friends are with O2, you can simple swap over to Orange with no worries at all.

Having the choice and freedom of being able to swap networks puts you the consumer in control. You choose how much you want to spend each month and should you require more texts you can simply buy bolt ons which only apply for the month no ongoing unlike monthly contracts.

Ok so yes we all know the iphone to buy off contract is an expensive purchase, But there are other options which allow you to claim a free iphone more details in the bio of this article.

look at this scenario, if you were currently on a contract and then due to a new job or other circumstance you need to move house. What if the new area you move to has no or little network coverage for your network? Well it's not their fault so you would be stuck paying for something you can no longer use.

So to round things up, pay as you go should be an option you consider over a contract iphone. You will have much more freedom to choose which network you want to use, or should you need to move across to another network if you move and the coverage is poor.
