Web Hosting Is The Act Of Housing, Maintaining And Serving Files

Web hosting is the service that makes your web site available to be viewed by others on the Internet. A web host provides space on its server, so that other computers around the world can access your website by means of a network or modem.

Web hosting is where the data of your website lives. Web hosting is a service that allows you to put your website (domain name) on the internet. After you have thought of a name for your website and registered the domain name, the next step is to find web hosting services from a web hosting provider.

Web hosting is a web-based storage provider that offers anyone or companies and organizations an opportunity to establish online web sites. For a small price, hosting services present memory space on their web servers that customers are able to "rent" and use for storing their personal web sites.

Web hosting is the act of housing, maintaining and serving files for a website. The role of a web hosting company is to provide 24/7 connection to the Internet by maintaining a network of complicated, high-end and expensive servers.

Shared web hosting means that there will be several hosting accounts belonging to different individuals on one and the same hosting server. This is the perfect solution for almost every type of website. Shared hosting is a way for a hosting company to offer affordable web hosting to their clients while having more users on one server and thus less overhead costs.

Shared website hosting is cheap and reliable so you do not have to stress about quality of the host you have. Should your site expand, then down the line you can expand and get a bigger plan. Shared hosting plans are sold to small users and small businesses instead of BIG businesses.
