Advice From A Prom Goddess - Sherri Hill Dresses For The SAT Crowd

The SAT crowd is the high school crowd that is all about university. You may not worry about, or updated on the most recent vogue trends, however, you still want to blend in at your prom. I actually suggest Sherri Hill dresses for the SAT crowd.

For this crowd, secondary school is only a stepping stone on the path to getting rich and successful in running a business, medical science, or law. You are probably juggling AP courses and dealing with your admissions articles. You want a look that is older and no-nonsense, but entertaining.

Above all you desperately want to fit in at your prom. You'll need options that are comfy and will never make you appear to be a nut. However, you likewise don't relish to seem like you are trying too much. Your goal should be "nerd chic."

Sherri Hill Evening Dresses

Sherri Hill formal dresses with "nerd style" charm works properly for night time events. Consider solid colors or color-blocked parts and items that are low on the frou-frou measure with good marks for smart tailoring. For example, consider style #2340.

It's a svelte long-sleeved black jersey structure having a jeweled medallion around the waistline. The sleeves are in fact see-through. It features a "first time at Yale" air of independence.

Your ensemble must express, "I am serious about my studies, but I am not overly determined to have fun." One thing a college admissions officer would certainly approve of! Try out an all-black gown having a splash of hue to brighten it up. As an example, take a look at style #1123.

It is a lengthy, black champagne flute designed gown with a chunk of hot pink across the bust. It is high waisted and gives the impression of a tall, slender body. A bow on the right shoulder is highlighted with black shimmer. It provides a "first year at the University of Pennsylvania" manner of self-confidence.

Sherri Hill Cocktail Dresses

Most Sherri Hill short dresses can be considered "college cocktail." This means, they are trendy and mature with young-at-heart whimsy. A good example of this is style #3705.

Ever encountered a toga celebration? You will when you go to university. This style is a soft red toga-style shawl. It has a simple lighthearted fit, practically as if you are basically covered with your best quilt. There is a tiny shiny decoration on the right hip. It has a "1st year at Harvard" aura of simplicity.

Also look for style #2341. It's a black bell contour, A-line mini along with classy symmetry. It states "business woman," but the lace cap sleeves say "prom princess or queen." This is a really put-together style with a "1st year at Princeton" genuineness.

My own best choice among Sherri Hill prom dresses for the SAT crowd is style #2300. It's a white satin sweetheart mini with a Breakfast at Tiffany's aura. There is a jeweled corset that has a bow. It has a "smart ingnue" level of quality.
