

Published based on Criminal Justice Degrees And Possible Career Paths

Criminal Justice Degrees And Possible Career Paths

Do you recollect playing cops and robbers when you were a youngster? Consider the exhilaration of watching CSI or the rush you feel when you solve the case on Law and Order SVU only minutes before the end of the TV show.

Increasingly since 9/11 the news media has asked the question what private citizens can do to aid to guard their country and closer to home. With so many trained men and women in our military overseas and in the reserves preparing to go with a moment's notice, there is an obvious hole in the law enforcement arena.

Criminology degrees online are the path to a surfeit of careers; criminal justice, forensic science, law enforcement, corrections, and homeland securities are only a small number of the specialties, but here is a list of a few of the actual professions that are obtainable by pursuing a criminal justice degree:

Attorney Bailiff Border Patrol Agent CIA Agent Corrections Officer Court Reporter Crime Scene Technician
Criminal Investigator Detective FBI Special Agent Police Officer Postal Service Investigator Private Investigator
Probation ... Parole Officer Secret Service Agent Sheriff US Marshall Prison Warden

With so many choices, Criminal Justice degrees offer a collection of opportunities to further your career or start an entirely new one. No matter if your fascination lies in the court room or walking a beat, investigating mail fraud, perhaps chasing a criminal or even protecting the President, a Criminal Justice degree is the yellow brick road to transport you toward your career goals.

Just like with other accredited online degree programs you can learn at your own pace while maintaining your day job. So whether you always daydreamed of catching the bad guys or just now got the inspiration to help on the home front after 9/11, a distance degree in Criminal Justice may be your defense from boredom and your relief from a dead end job.

Ellen Freeman is a frequent contributor to FindOnlineDegrees.com where you will find more facts about accredited online criminal justice degree programs, elearning resources, careers and more. If you are planning to enter law enforcement, criminology degrees are typically a necessity.

You can also find this article published on Criminal Justice Degrees And Possible Career Paths, and on the tag pages criminology degrees, E-Learning, education, law enforcement, online accredited degrees, online college, online college degree, online courses, online criminal justice degree.