A Review Of Tweet Adder

For all of its functions, Tweet Adder has extremely specific settings. For instance, you can set the time delay between the times that you send out unfollows, follow backs, follows, and messages. Also, it will provide numerous statistics with regard to your twitter campaign that may help you to determine what should be changed about it so that it will better fit the goals of your campaign, regardless if you're a promoter, e marketer, or social networker.

There are some people who complain that the Tweet Adder software will get your account suspended more easily than with other software. However, this is not true if you stick to the rules. Regardless of the reason, one of the default settings is a follower/following ratio of 1.5: 1, which works fine for the first 2000 people you follow. But then the rules for Twitter and the ratio should be changed to 1.1: 1. The ability to change this ratio is a very useful software feature. You just need to make sure that you change that ratio.

Many people are suspended for following too aggressively, but no one seems to be able to define what is aggressive. It seems that the general is not to auto follow back/follow more than one person/minute and everything will be fine. The fact is that a person could probably follow faster than this, but it isn't worth the risk. This is one of the primary reasons why people who use Tweet Adder have their accounts suspended, but the software will allow you follow as fast as 1/second.

First, there are many Tweet Adder statistics available, and the history button will allow you to check on the details concerning the updates, messages sent, infollows, and follows sent. The list of people to unfollow and follow back is one of the most useful statistics and seems to be accurate.

Next, Tweet Adder's settings are also much more specific. Also, Tweet Adder will remove the people from the message list once it sends a DM to them, and will only add them again after a DM has been sent to each follower. This way there are no repeats.

In addition, Tweet Adder saves the user IDs of people that you ask it to follow during sessions. This never causes a problem when you reload these lists when you reopen it.

Lastly, Tweet Adder will automate nearly every task with the settings that you assign to it. Simply open the software, and it will DM, unfollow, follow back, and follow all at the same time if you want. This is a great way to manage multiple accounts and a real time saver.

It is easy to avoid suspension. Simply don't leave important statistics on your default settings when they should be changed. There are numerous reasons why Tweet Adder was voted the best software. Used correctly, it works as advertised.
