Does the recession cause fear in your mind? Many people simply hear those dreaded words and stop spending their money. A recession can be sparked by any number of reasons. But the effect is the same: high unemployment, high inflation, low retail sales, and plenty of fear. Can one for see a recession? No it isn't possible. But is there a way to stop the effects? Yes, you can enter an industry where it has no bearing. This industry is the cleaning sector. Is the cleaning industry really a recession proof business in bad times?

A recession may bring doom and gloom to some companies as they are cyclical. They have up and down periods. The cleaning industry is constant. Offices must project a image to their customers. They have a professional look that must be maintained. They are busy trying to get customers. They do not have time to clean! It is cost productive to have them clean an office when they can simply hire you.

Have you ever tried cleaning a window? It is not as easy as it looks. Even simply cleaning the windshield on your car can prove to be trying. Imagine trying to clean hundreds of these on a daily or weekly basis. Also imagine that most of these windows are located at various heights. The fear of being up in the sky alone will have people calling you to clean their windows.

Carpet cleaning is another specialty niche. One can vacuum their rugs and get daily dirt and dust. But for expensive carpets they cannot be cleaned just by running a vacuum over them. Some require steam cleaning. For deeper trapped dirt and major stains a professional carpet cleaner is needed to restore the carpet to the original look. Many offices and personal homes need this service.

You can earn a very good income by cleaning people's homes. You will not make a lot of money off one home. The trick is to get a book of customers that you have on a regular schedule. You can plan your day and know in advance how much you will make. It is possible to clean plenty of homes daily. You can later expand and hire workers to do the work for you so you don't have to clean yourself.

There is now a new form of cleaning that is becoming popular. Many homes don't want to use harsh chemicals and detergents in their homes. Studies have shown that the fumes are harmful and may not kill all the germs and bacteria. They are now requesting green cleaning. You will use products that are safer for the environment. These many cost more than the regular material. But the benefit is that you can charge more money.

Is the cleaning industry really a recession proof business in bad times? Cleaning has been around for ages and will continue for years to come. Inventions have been made which make cleaning easier, but it has not eliminated the need for someone to do the work.
