SEO Is Easy

Are you wondering what you can do to get people to actually FIND your site in the search results? If so, and you have looked into SEO then surely you have become at least a little overwhelmed by all the possibilities.

How can you create a website which will get noticed without spending a lot of time learning all of the complicated terminology and concepts involved in SEO? If you are ready to make SEO simple and use it to get your site noticed, here are the four key principles to get you started.

First and foremost, think about focusing. How specific is your business? Do you know your target audience? If you cant answer these questions, you will find it very hard to differentiate your company.

It might take some time, but it is in your interests to get specific on what is your proposition, as it will ensure your site will be noticed by your targeted audience.

Secondly, you should place your keywords exactly where search engines will be able to read them and to understand your website is relevant - headings, your images alt tags etc. If you want this to work, placing them only in content will not help.

Third, you need to have a powerful key to action, which would make your visitors click other pages of your site. It is very important because it determines your Click Through Rate, which is actually tracked by Google. Low indicator would mean your website is not relevant, so in order to be aware what your Click Through Rate is, install Google analytics.

Fourth, you need to make sure that you are linking to sites which are relevant and well known by the search engines. This means that you can have one thousand back links to just any site and still be behind a site which has fifty relevant links. The best way to build back links is to comment on other peoples blogs and to place articles on content delivery sites. Just make sure that you are connecting to relevant sites.

Try to implement these principles into practice and make sure none of them is missing. SEO is not a one day process and requires dedication and patience. Only then you will get your website ranked and will be generating more traffic and winning new clients.
