Yacht Racing

Yacht is a light sailing vessel typically used for recreation around the world. Yacht is generally perceived to serve pleasure purposes and has luxury connotations to it. These days they are termed as power boats which have motors attached. Special luxury yachts are designed for sports. The motor can also be switched off if one is sailing for leisure and wants a peaceful time on water.

Yachting is the word given to recreational boating. It has become a luxurious way of spending holidays as rich families get their personal boats and hit the sea during vacations. These lavish vessels also offer a variety of facilities on board for convenience. Competitive sailing has also become a famous class of water sports. Racing yachts are built to be extremely light for strategic purpose.

Cruising is a step ahead of recreational yachting and involves travelling on boat and going to places. Cruising is a whole new lifestyle for those who find comfort and peace at sea. You live on the boat for extended periods of time and visit new destinations for pleasure. It requires passion, skill, knowledge of meteorology and navigation and a lot of planning before you take up a sea voyage.

Yacht racing has become a popular sport everywhere and families and companies sign up their teams for annual racing regattas. This sport is full of thrill and requires a test of equipment, intellect and skill in maneuvering safety. There are numerous racing events conducted every year.

Yacht racing events have two types; harbor or buoy racing and offshore racing. Buoy racing is conducted in protected waters and lasts for a shorter time period. Mostly the event ends in few hours. Offshore racing on the other hand is a bigger event and takes several days and even months. It involves going into open water and travelling long distances around the globe. This is a real test of skill and nerves.

Several racing events like Dartmouth regatta and The America's Cup are held for which teams sign up weeks in advance. There are events for offshore as well as buoy racing. People get special yachts designed for such events. Louis Vuitton Trophy is also a famous one. It is a series of match race regattas. Eight to ten teams from various countries take part in each event of the series. This is a much awaited trophy for lovers of Yachting lifestyle.
