In difficult financial times many individuals who have received redundancy payouts appear for opportunities to break away from becoming in an employed position and attempt their hand at becoming self employed. The real difficulty is knowing which company they have the skills and aptitude to invest in.

Few people have the abilities that are easily transferable to a totally new venture and most want to try a different occupation all together anyway. This could be a extremely difficult time for bread winners who're having to make hard decisions for themselves and their families.

1 occupation most individuals possess the skills for is driving and an increasing quantity of people are deciding to become a taxi or private hire driver. They believe that this job will enable them to have a stress free life without having any 1 to answer too although enjoying themselves earning cash while doing some thing they appreciate.

In reality though, because of the recession a lot of individuals now determine hiring a taxi is some thing they can do without and would rather take public transport or walk to their destination. This coupled with the quantity of new taxi drivers on the road who are also looking for a new vocation means that there's actually extremely little cash to be made.

Research shows that almost 50% of new taxi drivers never renew their applications using the council once a year has gone by and those that remain within the trade have had to decrease their earning expectations dramatically.

In the event you are convinced that this is really a job for you then do proper research prior to spending money on a vehicle and licences. How many other firms are there in your area? Can you discover a niche they are not exploiting? Are you really prepared to work unsocial hours when others truly need your services? If the answer is no then you need to appear elsewhere and save your redundancy money.
