If you have a business or personal website then you need web hosting service and choosing the right service is very important to the sustainability and success of your website.

1. Free web hosting providers often aren't reliable.

While it is pretty difficult to refuse such an attractive offer of a free web hosting where you don't have to pay even a penny to get your website hosted. Free web hosting may work if you are just hosting a personal website, but if you own a business site then it is a bad choice since you will face limited tools and unreliable service.

2) Cheaper is not always better

The Internet offers a wide range of web hosting service possibilities, and you can go online to check them out in-depth. There will be different fees that are associated with using these different services. You need to keep in mind that just because a service is a cheaper alternative it does not mean that it will be the best choice for your needs. It is important that you realize when you choose a company based on cost that you may be sacrificing quality and that the cheap price probably won't be worth it in the end.

3) Relying on others for backup

Although most web host commit that they will backup their server and customers' information on a regular basis, nevertheless you should never rely solely on your web host to perform some of these crucial tasks, but you should periodically restore these data on your own to make sure the data are in good hands.

4) Fail to get the right web host for your website

It is a huge mistake and often the biggest mistake a website owner makes to choose the wrong web hosting company for a website. If you aren't careful, the relationship between you and your host will end badly, as your site will continually experience delays and your online business will suffer losses.
