ABC's LOST- An Epic TV Show

An Airplane crash. Survivors stuck on a mysterious, tropical island. Time travel, mysticism, and mysteries. Planning, back stabbing and revenge. Such is the story of ABC's LOST. The sensation of a tv series strike airwaves in the year 2004, and has had a cult following since that time. Well-known for its insufficient answers, the tv show lost a good deal of viewers after the first 2 seasons, but retains a devoted following to this day.

ABC's LOST initially follows the survivors of Oceanic Flight 815 immediately after it crashes on an island engulfed in mystery. The group is struggling to survive as they experience nightly disappearances, polar bears, and also a strange monster made of black smoke. As time goes on, they locate a hatch buried into the ground, and discover inside a guy who was certainly not on their flight. The man's name is Desmond, and he is pressing a button every 8 minutes in order to "save the planet." Desmond abandons the hatch, leaving behind the survivors to continue the process.

The series takes a turn at that point in the series. The survivors discover a guy who says his name is Henry Gale, however, after a bit of time, they discover that the person is instead Ben Linus, the boss of another group of island inhabitants called "The Others," plus they are the ones who were taking people from the group in the beginning. ABC's LOST gets insane when Linus escapes, and the survivors discontinue pressing the button, causing the hatch to explode in a burst of electromagnetic energy. Meanwhile, main group members of the survivors are captured by the Others.

After many weeks of beatings and near torture, the taken survivors learn that they're on an entirely separate island, and that these people are doing work out of the old facilities of a group known as the Dharma Initiative. No one is very clear on why the Others are there, but it is revealed that Ben was accountable for killing all the former Dharma people, and that he feels he's given the job of "protecting the area," and is under the direction of a person called Jacob. ABC's LOST gets definitely exciting when a freighter shows up off the coast, and the survivors believe they're saved. Nevertheless, it's quickly revealed that the freighter isn't there in order to save, but eliminate them, as their head is a former boss of the Others who is seeking vengeance.

Thankfully, the helicopter pilot of the freighter is unsure with the situation, and despite the freighter itself getting blown up, is able to aid six of the survivors get off the Island. A few years after the fact, they still have not told any individual on earth about what really occurred after the plane crash, or that there are other survivors still on the island. Nevertheless, ABC's LOST gets even crazier when another survivor pops up to the world named John Locke, and makes clear that in the event that they do not return to the island, everyone they adore there will certainly be killed. Although it takes some coercion, and the death of the messenger, every person eventually goes back.

In the period that they were gone, the rest of the survivors have been surviving several crazy situations. After they left, Ben and John had turned an archaic wheel as a way to "move" the island and keep the remaining survivors safe and sound. Nonetheless, during this process, they had dislodged this tropical isle from time, and the people found themselves time traveling at a regular rate, leading to a few strange deaths. Locke is finally able to stop the time traveling, however the island is at that point trapped in the 1970's, therefore when the survivors that had left return, they also find themselves out of sync.

The story plot in ABC's LOST gets to be more and more convoluted, but the most sensible thing you can do is watch it yourself. The story is actually more complicated than it seems today, and is a lot more than worth watching.
