The Popular Choice Online Nursing Degrees

There are a shortage of nurses, so obtaining an online nursing degree is a lucrative choice for a career. There are several different levels of degrees that are attainable, depending on the level that one is interested in.

First, one can do choose to pursue a certificate or diploma. These are not as popular anymore and are not the fastest path to use to receive a nursing license. In these programs, the students work alongside nurses' aides in the local hospitals while receiving a diploma. This can take up to three years to receive a diploma, but there is an upside. The upside is that most times, students will receive immediate jobs. Online nursing programs are offered at Kaplan University and University of Phoenix, both popular online schools.

The most popular choice for many is the Associate's Degree. It can be earned in two years and opens many opportunities. All Licensed Practical Nurses (LPN) and some Registered Nurses (RN) have this degree. Many people use this as a stepping stone to pursue their Bachelor's Degree, while others use it to pursue their career as a nurse.

The Bachelor of Science Degree (BSN) is a more advanced degree and takes four years to complete. Registered nurses can pursue this degree to earn more money, while working.

Fourth is the Master's of Science Degree. Typically this degree is for nurses that are more specialized, like a Nurse Practitioner. Pursuing an MSN online has become a popular choice as one can work at their own pace to receive the degree.

The most elite degree is the Ph. D. There are not many nurses that choose to pursue this degree, therefore there are a shortage of nurses that have obtained it. But, the demand for nurses with a Ph. D are sought after for more extensive projects. This does take a huge commitment, as the hours required for studying are long. One must be dedicated for the long haul, but the career will be rewarding.

For busy individuals that wish to pursue this career, online nursing programs have become a popular choice. It allows the person to complete their degree in the comfort of their own home and at their own pace. It is an investment that will pay for itself once the degree and a job are attained. This can be done while working another job or being a stay-at-home mom.
