

Published based on Inspire Your Kids And Better Your Life With A College Degree

Inspire Your Kids And Better Your Life With A College Degree

In order to achieve your goals, they must be obtainable. When you set out after something, what do you do in order to keep on track? When I returned to school to earn my college degree after ten years in the workforce with only a high school diploma, I thought of my children and how proud they would be when I graduated every step of the way. Searching for accredited online colleges shouldn't require much time or energy, and it could prove to be worth the effort.

When I went back to school to pursue my Associate's degree, I knew that I would one day tell my children that I did it for them. Of course, I would like them to be able to start their education a lot earlier; there will be a lot more potential to reach their goals that way. I am able to say that with just two years of a community college education and I was motivated to reach any goal that I set forth for myself.

Community college is a great place to start out when you are unsure of where you would like to go with your education and career. I was skeptical at first, but after speaking with someone in the admissions department, I learned that a general two year Associate's degree would allow me to move into any Bachelor's degree program later on. The flexible course schedules allowed me to work and go to school on nights and weekends.

While my children were in school, I worked at my usual desk job for forty hours a week. I woke up early on Saturdays to sit in on my course. I was fortunate enough to be out of class before my kids went to their football practice in the afternoon. I managed to graduate and only have to take two courses at night during the week, allowing me more time with my kids when they came home from school.

After just two years, I completed my Associate's degree. I was so proud that I completed the degree in the allotted amount of time. I received an increase in pay at my place of work and was able to see the benefits of receiving an advanced degree. I then decided I would enroll in my Bachelor's degree program.

I discovered that I would automatically be accepted into any state university's system after completing my associate's degree at a community college. Earning my Associate's degree at a lower cost that guaranteed my acceptance into a university was well worth it.

One of my main goals for completing my education was to inspire my children. I knew that if they would graduate from high school and not move forward with their education, there would be nothing I could say because I too did not go to college. My hope was that seeing their mother graduate later in life would inspire them to enroll earlier. Before taking the next step in your life you should consider searching for online courses to get more info.

Once you decide that you will do something, make a feasible timeline so that you do not fall behind. Once you speak to a career counselor at the school of your choice, you can properly set a schedule of online classes so that you can make a plan to graduate. Check out EarnMyDegree.com for more useful information as well.

You can also find this article published on Inspire Your Kids And Better Your Life With A College Degree, and on the tag pages accredited online colleges, associate degree at home, associate's, associate's degrees, E-Learning, online classes, online college, Online colleges, online courses, online degree, online degrees, online education, online mba, online schools, online universities.