4 Different Kindle Covers And Cases

Cases and covers for all portable electronics range in style, colors and usability and the Kindle is no different. Ultimately this means the process of finding the best Kindle case can be a difficult process. By becoming aware of the different styles that there are you can speed up the process and rule out many of the options. Below is an overview of a few of the more popular Kindle cases.

If you are after a protective cover which offers the most coverage a hard Kindle case might be right for you. Hard protective covers for the Kindle offer incredible protection from drops, scrapes and in some cases even the elements. For some, the biggest disadvantage is the size. Because of the design which is often a two piece, protective covers can be rather bulky.

The second type of case to know about are leather Kindle cases. Most commonly you can find black or brown leather cases, however there really are many colors and designs to choose from. One of the more functional leather Kindle covers has a reading stand built in to the cover. While this may not be exactly what you need, it does show the range of leather cases available.

One of my personal favorites are Kindle covers with a built in reading stand. Just as the name implies the case has a built in reading stand. The stand is either built into the back or props the back of the case with the front cover flap. Even though case stands can add some extra bulk to your Kindle, most stand cases are comparable in size to a standard cover.

Skin cases are a unique, lightweight and form fitting option for the Kindle. Kindle skins are different than all other cases. A skin which is a thin usually vinyl material, is applied to the front and back of your Kindle. Each piece is only a few millimeters thick and weights almost nothing. Even though it won't protect from big drops, it will protect from scratches and scrapes.

As you can see there are plenty of Kindle cases to choose from. The case styles mentioned above are only some of the options to consider. My favorite style are leather covers. It is important to find a Kindle case which provides the right mix of protection and style for you.
