The title of the video has an impact on the end results of your marketing strategy. People will search keywords to find the video they are looking for online. For example, if I were to look for cooking videos, I would search cooking tips or cooking techniques. Your goal is to use a title that reaches your target audience as well as getting ranked for your specific keywords. This is done by putting specific keywords into the title, but keeping it short and simple. Keep the keywords specific to the video and do not go out of context. Use an attention grabbing, eye catching title, you want to stand out to other people against all other videos out there. If you can pique peoples curiosity with your video, you want to make sure you have an attention grabbing title. If you have ever done any copywriting, you have learned about the importance of a good title. Titles for videos are very much the same. You want to portray the purpose of the video clearly. The title of the video is the best place to do just that. Keep the title simple, while still conveying the clear message of the video. It can take a bit to fully grasp the concept, but the end results are effective.

What have just talked about is crucial for your understanding about video marketing, but there is a lot more to think about. Gaining a high altitude snapshot will be of immense benefit to you. The rest of the document will provide you with a few more important factors to bear in mind.

You should make it possible for your viewers to embed your videos on their own sites. This would not only help your video get more exposure but at the same time it will get you targeted backlinks from relevant websites. This means there's no reason you should want to prevent people from doing this, as it only helps you. Also, by doing this you allow your video to go viral since the viewers will want to watch and spread it around, and one key way that videos spread is by embedding the code on their own site.

If you submit your RSS feed to some good directories, your videos can reach a wider audience. It's likely that some people browsing these directories will subscribe to your feed, and then you will have more regular viewers for your videos. RSS gives you a way to start gaining a list of loyal subscribers, which can accelerate your video marketing efforts.
