

Published based on Everything About Superstar Spotting in California

Everything About Superstar Spotting in California

There are lots of approaches to spotting your favorite celebrity in California, only one of the easiest is simply by walking from the front door. In Santa Monica, an 8 square mile city, comes complete with jogging paths, shops, farmers markets, and eateries, so it is common to see a celebrity out and about, exploring the shops and the beautiful beaches. In Chicago, it's Rodeo Drive that the celebrities hit the hardest-the shops are exclusive as well as the price tags high, which means it attracts the rich and famous.

If finding celebrities partying down at the nightclub is more your style, then you'll want to check out some of the hottest nightclubs around, for example the Cabana Club where Britney Spears and Nicole Kidman are actually spotted, to the Mood, where Christina Aguilera and Paris Hilton result dancing the night away.

A whole new "hot spot" can be decided upon as fast as it will take for someone to simply whisper the name from the streets, so the current trendiest nightclub destinations is often tricky to stay on top of. Should you be sure you want to check a location out, always try to call ahead to reserve a table when possible (that amounted to money on top of the cover charge) but with a table reservation, you're more prone to get in the door. And make sure to dress the part, or the bouncer may conveniently "lose" your reservation anyway. The fun of this approach is that you have a chance to demonstrate your moves and dance right along your chosen celebrity, giving you a chance to mingle together on a more personal level than you could have any another way.

Dining out is also a popular way to spot celebrities, although of course this makes it a bit more difficult to really interact with them other than interrupting their dinner and making it obvious you're trying to get some face time together. However, if you just want to observe them from the distance, restaurants are the best option. Make sure to check out The Ivy or Fred 62, because they are two of the hottest restaurants around.

Whatever approach you are taking, California has got plenty of locations to check out and have fun in, in case you don't end up seeing your chosen celebrity.

Consider the web page Taylor Swift.

You can also find this article published on Everything About Superstar Spotting in California